Migrants, Immigrants, and Slaves: Tobacco became the long awaited cash crop for the Virginia Company, who wanted to make money off their investment in Jamestown. The water immediately adjacent to the land was deep enough to permit the colonists to anchor their ships, yet have an easy and quick departure if necessary.

Although most people "wouldn't touch" the crop, Rolfe was able to make his fortune. On October 1, 70 new settlers arrived aboard the English "Mary and Margaret" with the Second Supply, following a journey of approximately three months. Relations had already been mixed between the newcomers and the Powhatan Indians. Worse yet, the Bermuda survivors had brought few supplies and only a small amount of food with them, expecting to find a thriving colony at Jamestown.

Crafting a pot, 17th century style. As I explore, volunteers in period dress and one hundred women, who brought or started families, had arrived in prior years, but was when establishing families became a primary focus. The History of Virginia in Four Parts.
