The text does not say, but my guess is that it was the Pharisees. When a child honors an unworthy, unkind, parent and does so because he or she recognizes that God has appointed them to hold this position of authority and honor, they are submitting themselves to the sovereign hand of God. Honoring someone sets them above . Where is the heart? Second, we must seek to provide as much physical and emotional comfort as necessary. And his eyelids are raised in arrogance. In this passage, it is noteworthy that Paul does specifically apply the Fifth Commandment to younger children. The fortress there was called the Alamo and was guarded by men when Santa Anna, O my son? Honoring parents means to think highly of them, in contrast to esteeming them lightly:
