Is Terrence Malick assuming Stanley Kubrick's mantle? With that in mind, I see this film as a modern version of the old medieval contemplative tradition of Augustine or Thomas Aquinas. First, and most importantly, this Tree of Life is drawn from the human, mammalian point of view. Many see this as a hit-and-miss film, but unless you truly focus your attention. This movie is one which pushes you out of your comfort zone. There are shades of Kubrick throughout, but ultimately, this is completely and originally Malick doing Malick.
