The first metaphor is the body. However, this in itself tells us nothing about the nature of that church, whether universal or local, and everything we have seen so far indicates that local churches were the only kind known in the New Testament. We will do this at some length, as we proceed.

And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: The Universalist Whether it is considered anatomically or theologically, Paul's famous illustration of the Body of Christ must refer to an organism found in one place and time. What Christ said in Matthew The ordinances are not important, neither is baptism. Why should the local churches be independent, when to take such a stance may cause a portion of Scriptures deals with problems in the church, and the proper way of dealing with .
